The Bees' Knees

By Marilou Newell

The warnings that bee populations are dropping, hive collapses catastrophic, and our crops at risk for lack of pollination have been widely written about and discussed over the past few years. And while much has been said, there's very little follow-up on how things are going.

Well, things are still very tenuous – not only for bees, but for all pollinators around the globe. So what is being done to stabilize bee populations?

These questions and others for improving backyard environments to help bees make a living were expertly discussed when the Sippican Lands Trust in partnership with the Marion Garden Group hosted local beekeepers and cranberry growers Paul and Linda Rinta at the Marion Music Hall on September 30.

Linda's presentation explored how modern agricultural practices, habitat loss, diseases, and climate change have collided, causing bees and other pollinators to suffer a mass die-off. She also gave the audience an education in apiculture or the study of honeybees and their local cousin the bumblebee.

Rinta said 75 percent of all flowering plants require pollinators. That figure goes up when discussing fruits and vegetables produced in New England; therefore, dependence on bees to keep food production high is critical, she explained.

Delving deeper into the subject of types of bees, Rinta said honeybees were imported from Europe during the 1600s and, although that was centuries in the past, "They are not native ... they are a tropical insect."

According to Rinta, early settlers used the honey for brewing purposes, and honey has been used as a preservative and medicine for centuries.

In the small universe of the honeybee colony, there will be one queen to care for and the bees will aggressively protect her and the hive, Rinta said. "They have 'group think' and act as one body," she said.

To highlight that point, she said that one time she had a small hole in her beekeeper suit. "One bee found that hole and communicated its location to the others and then they were all trying to bite me."

She said honeybees have specialized jobs, a division of labor that is geared towards building hives or colonies larger and larger and protecting the queen.

Continuing with the history lesson, Rinta said beekeeping began around 2400 B.C. and was used in mummification processes. "It's anti-fungal, anti-bacterial, and won't spoil."

Of the humble bumblebee, Rinta pointed out that they are a local species. "They are cold climate insects that have evolved and adapted to our climate." She said bumblebees don't live in colonies, don't communicate as one unit, and don't winter over. "Bumblebees are more solitary and much less aggressive," she said.

So what happened to bring these important worker bees to their knees? A perfect storm of problems, Rinta explained.

In the 1970s, farms were smaller and more diverse, Rinta said, but by the next decade the honey market had taken a dive. New pesticides were introduced, industrial farming expanded, diseases attacked colonies, and "...there were fewer and fewer migratory beekeepers."

Add to that list the negative influences of climate change, a lack of floral diversity, and habitat loss.

"Well, bad things happen even when intentions are good..." she concluded. "In the 1990s, hives were decimated."

Rinta said of the 4,000 different species of bees in North America, all are struggling and some have become extinct. And it's not just the bees, she said. It's the butterflies, too.

So what can we – the average homeowners, the average backyard gardeners – do to help endangered insects? Floral diversity.

Rinta said that by giving bees a variety of flowering plants throughout the growing season, gardeners are helping to provide bees with nutrition. She said plants considered weeds by landscapers are actually critical plants to bees, such as milkweed and golden rod. She said forests are poor environments for bees. Bees need fields and meadows with a variety of plant types in order to thrive. And, gardeners may also keep bees.

Rinta was clear that beekeeping does not have to be a large-scale endeavor. While she and her husband have eight hives that they manage year round next to their cranberry bogs, the average homeowner can install small mason bee boxes that are non-intrusive.

"Mason bees have a range of about 100 yards and fly for only 30 days, then live in tunnel nests – they are easy to manage," she told her audience.

When selecting plants for flowerbeds, Rinta said, "Assume everything as [having] been triple sprayed with insecticides." She said to talk to nursery owners and select plants that may have been more organically raised.

As for commercial honey consumers, honey found in chain grocery stores, Rinta cautioned, "Those are blended, heated ... all the good properties have been removed. Some honey is coming from China where insecticide controls are poor... Know your beekeeper."

One final word from Rinta regarding beekeeping: "You will get stung!"

The Boykeeper

This Imperfect Life

By Jean Perry

Sunday morning was the kind of morning that makes you feel better about summer's end and reminds you of just how beautiful autumn is. The air is so fresh and every conscious inhale is a delight; your lungs snap into each breath like teeth biting into a cool, crisp apple. The light is changing, the sun's slanted rays cascade clean and bright bringing a figurative life to all the browning flowers and fields, and the smell of organic decomposition mixes with fiery color.

I'm thinking all this from the passenger seat of a pick-up truck driven slowly down an unpaved road and through a cranberry bog in West Wareham by a beekeeper named Linda who was kind enough to take the time to show me the Tao of keeping bees. Linda was in Marion on Saturday giving a talk on bees, and I was there at her house on Sunday in pursuit of a cover photo for this week's edition.

We are wearing matching white bee suits to protect us from an unlikely swarm of agitated bees, and I have a mesh for my head if I found myself tensing up in trepidation, although to avoid that effect I had my zoom lens already attached to the camera.

Just walk with purpose and confidence, Linda advises me, as she leads me behind the stacked wooden hive boxes. That advice would run on a continuous loop in my mind for the next half hour.

A steady stream of smoke billows from her shiny metal tin full of smoldering twigs already acting as a calming elixir to the bees flying around us.

With winter approaching, Linda explains how she has to bolster the colonies by supplementing their food supply with a natural sugar water to keep honey production going and to strengthen the bees for the cold months when their natural food supply dwindles before disappearing altogether. It's an intervention of sorts, essential for the survival of Linda's bees. She says the bees are already slightly agitated by the drop in pollen and nectar production as cranberry blossom season is over and flowers are dying off.

So attentive is Linda as she gingerly lifts the lids and slides out the frames of honeycomb just heaving with bees to inspect the bees' progress since she last checked them yesterday. As I stand here taking in the scene, spellbound by the mystery of it all and energized by the adrenaline, I think about my boy ... and how he would absolutely hate this.

As a child on the autism spectrum, his sensory dysfunction disorder and hypersensitivity to sound means he's got sonic ears. The stingers on the bees aren't the main reason the insect provokes his extreme phobia; it's also the buzzing that (over)stimulates a strong sensory response, causing a physical pandemonium to spread from head to toe and a flight response that is so strong he would likely jump off a cliff or back into traffic to avoid it.

As Linda speaks about bees, how they 'group think' and respond as a holistic entity to stimuli, she explains the different aspects of caring for a beehive – controlling parasites, keeping the entrance blocks clean, and finally harvesting the honey – and I feel enthralled and inspired. As honeybee populations struggle for survival in the millennium, so do the keepers of bees as they scurry to strengthen the colonies, these priceless pollinators of crops like Linda's cranberries.

I watch Linda practice her 'beecraft.' She talks about the bees, unaware, as if they are her children almost. She knows when they are getting agitated and what to do in response. She soothes them with gentle puffs of smoke and talks about how, when in a docile mood, you can almost pet the fuzzy back of a bee.

She says as a beekeeper she is guaranteed to be stung on a somewhat regular basis. Naturally, I start to see the figurative similarities of motherhood.

Every day now she mixes her sugary formula for the bees so that the next generation of baby "winter bees" can grow strong enough to endure the winter.

She pours the golden liquid into the first clear glass canning jar, flips it over, and carefully affixes it to the outside of the front entrance to the hive. As I watch, another thought is superimposed in my mind. I see my own hands pouring a mixture of liquid nutrition into a bag, securing the cover, and hooking it onto an IV pole.

And sometimes Linda puts the sugar water into a large plastic zipper bag, carefully places it inside the hive, and cuts a slit so the bees can crawl inside. A vision of me taking my plastic enteral feeding bag of supplemental formula and, grabbing onto the tube and threading it through an automated pump, in my mind I attach it directly to my son's g-tube.

I'm always amazed by the manifestations of parallel symbolism in life ... like the Universe is keeping it real and reminding you of the things that matter most at the time.

At home, much like in the hive, keeping the boy's weight up and his nutrition adequate has been a struggle wavering on war. With such a limited food intake due to sensory aversions and preferences for certain textures and tastes, we can barely keep a calorie in him long enough to store any fat because all the boy wants to do is ride his bike and his scooter. And as we are now in the throes of adolescence, the virtual winter of his childhood, this is my chance to bolster the boy up as much as possible to send him strong into adulthood.

I've met with his school, the food service director, the lunch ladies – all in an effort to try to get more substance into the boy during school hours. I've had open discussions with people close to the family, asking them what they see and where they would make changes in the routine to benefit the boy. I have books and Internet articles and finally the support from another person living in the house whose dedication to the boy matches my own.

With all of this in place, you'd think the 'boy hive' would be teeming with metaphorical honey – but it's not. And, just as if Linda were to stop being so attentive and devoted to the bees the buck would stop with her, it would stop with me.

Someone told me she thought the boy needed me home more, especially at night, and that perhaps I should find a regular 9-to-5 job. Another suggested I just needed to manage my time more effectively. And I say maybe it's a bit of both that is needed to avert the painful sting of failure and the reward of a hive drenched in honey – the reward of the beekeeper.

I feel at this point in the season I have to take off my protective bee suit and tend to my hive "with purpose and confidence" as Linda suggested, and trust that there will be honey enough to keep us all going forward into the next season of life, whatever that will be.

I thanked Linda for the thrill of the introduction to her bees, the hives, and for the great cover photo. She gave me an information booklet and a special plastic cup for the boy to catch a bee with and study it beneath the magnifying lid, thinking perhaps it may help him overcome part of his fear. I didn't mention how she had somehow helped me reckon with my own fear – the sting of failure in my boykeeping and the collapse of the proverbial colony. Instead, I told her how inspired I felt after observing her beekeeper's ritual.

Linda and I plan to reconvene after the winter to discuss the progress of the bees. And hopefully, by then, the literal honey of the beekeeper and the figurative honey of the boykeeper will be flowing, and marching into spring with "purpose and confidence," we'll avoid another sting. Our colonies will thrive.

The Native Brook Trout

By George B. Emmons

The colorful brook trout is an indigenous cold water fish in New England streams such as our local Mattapoissett and Sippican Rivers, true to the heritage of their Native American names. As a biological member of the northern char family, the brook trout spawns in autumn rather than in spring like many other aquatic species.

As it becomes even more colorful to match the autumn foliage as the shorter days and colder nights cut off the supply of chlorophyll to trees of deciduous leaves of the maples, oaks, aspen, and sumac, Mother Nature similarly and simultaneously paints the bellies of the trout a flaming red as they swell with roe and morph their backs with green and blue worm-like markings of contrasting ceremonial regalia, as in my illustration, to dance to the Indian Summer celestial drum beat of reproduction.

Sportsmen have affectionately call it "Brookie" as one of their favorite angling rewards with a voracious appetite and fighting fury when hooked after dashing out from the back eddy of a streamside boulder to bite at almost any reasonably presented dry or wet fly, or even by a youngster dangling a terrestrial squirming worm for the thrill of landing such a beautiful prize.

Such a magnificent aquatic performance has inspired conservation-minded sportsmen, especially fly fishermen, to gradually customize the practice of "catch and release," deserving of at least one curtain call at a later time and bigger size, or even for someone else. This concept of release is gaining in popularity almost everywhere in the sporting world.

to the cold water habitat of pristine pools of runoff of the melting of the Wisconsin glacier some 25,000 years ago. Their adaptation to such cold water gave them constitutional survival capacity all over Northern New England, except in the late 19th century when fir trees that shaded streams we cut down by tanneries for turpentine to cure hides. Unfortunately, these were buffalo hides that came in an unending stream of railroad freight cars from the western plains, almost wiping out buffalo from the face of the Earth. Simultaneously, the lack of shade on trout waters increased the temperature, diminishing the brook trout population in most New England States.

Now the brook trout has recovered from near extinction and, as we speak, move upstream by falling water temperatures to select a pristine bed of loose gravel and a good supply of oxygen.

In reproduction once again, they are ceremoniously completing an unbroken circle of their kind, traditional to the original period of natural post-glacial global warming which hopefully will be followed by another cycle of eventual cooling in keeping with the unending orbit of planets in the sky. Then Mother Earth may herself recover from all that we have done to her, but as in my tale of the brook trout, not without our help.

from celebrating a project three years in the making.

After remarks from key project participants, the gathered attendants watched the ceremonial groundbreaking for the Marguerite K. Repass Garden and Library Entrance Improvement Project at the Elizabeth Taber Library.

Inside the library, President of the Library Trustees Jay Pateakos remarked to those attending that this project was a combination of a public and private effort. He noted that, for him, this project was personal, having struggled for years with handicapped accessibility for his son who is in a wheelchair and was in attendance nearby.

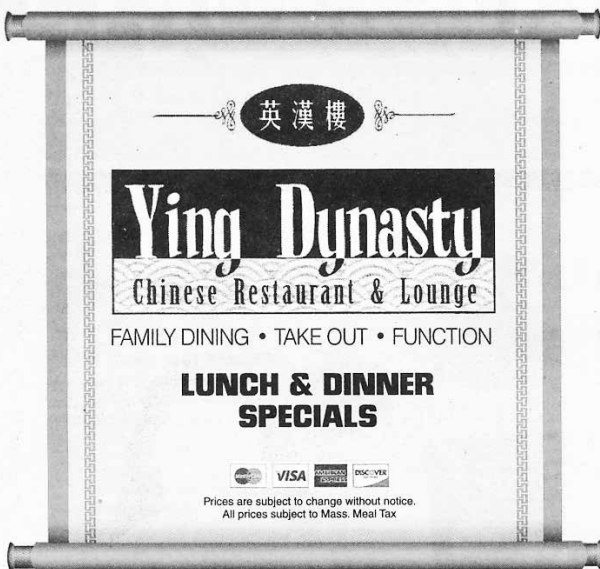

Library Director Libby O'Neil expressed her excitement and gratitude for the "generous donation and vision for this special gathering place," thanking Peggy Repass, former Taber librarian, and her family for their donation to the project.

O'Neill added that the new entrance will be easier for people to access, and with its stone benches, will provide a gathering place for "a multitude of outdoor activities such as kids' crafts, outdoor book clubs and reading," as O'Neill described it.

Robert Raymond, also a library trustee, architect, and liaison for the project, noted that the impetus for the entrance improvement started with the installation of automatic doors.

Pateakos pointed out that the library might need to be closed for a short period of time during construction.

Selectman Steve Gonsalves said the only word to express the feeling of the day was "love." He also read a quote by Albert Einstein to underscore the value of the library and the project – "The only thing you absolutely have to know is the location of the library."

The afternoon concluded with a symbolic groundbreaking with Mrs. Repass, O'Neil, and Selectmen Gonsalves and Norm Hills posing with hardhats and shovels to commemorate the beginning of the project. Trustee Raymond stated that the family will be managing the project and is currently seeking contractors to perform the work.

A True Tale of Survival and Love in the Amazon

By Marilou Newell

We live in an era where reality TV takes us naked and alone into jungles or pits humans against one another in faux settings of castaway islands eating roasted rats and raw fish. With cameras recording 'adventures' for mass consumption, we the consumers watch with wide-eyed fascination while everyday people seemingly test their skills, wills, and physical well-beings against nature and all its might. It is, of course, a modern day farce. It isn't real – it's TV.

On September 27, people packed the meeting room at the Mattapoisett Library to hear a true-life survival story by Dartmouth resident and author Holly FitzGerald as she discussed her memoir Ruthless River: Love and Survival by Raft on the Amazon's Relentless Madre de Dios, published this year by Vintage.

FitzGerald's story is the real deal. Her delivery belied the terror they felt when, in 1973, she and her husband were lost on the Madre de Dios in the Amazon River Basin for 26 days – days of torment, dehydration, starvation, and hope.

Of course we know the end of the story – they made it out. But how it happened, their experiences leading up to and after being found near death as told by the author, was thrilling and suspenseful, to say the least.

FitzGerald is a petite soft-spoken woman with a sense of humor that creeps up on you as she talks about how she encouraged her newly minted husband to cast all caution to the wind, put their 9-to-5 lives on hold, and head out on the "adventure of a lifetime," traveling from Colombia to Brazil along the Amazon River and its tributaries. It was to have been part of their plan to circle the globe while unencumbered by professions or children.

What ensued was a journey deep into their inner reserves of youthful optimism, physical stamina, and their love for one another.

After arriving in South America to begin their "year-long honeymoon," they took some time to enjoy impromptu meetings with the indigenous people. They also met a couple of anthropologists who were studying the Iscabacabu, a tribe that had been almost completely annihilated except for 26 souls.

FitzGerald sprinkled her story with endearing anecdotes about how they enjoyed and experienced the colors, textures, cultural differences, and the people, especially the children they came in contact with.

"Fitz made up a game of hide and seek," she explained, pointing to a picture in the PowerPoint presentation that showed children lying on the ground, thinking they were invisible as Fitz finds them. The audience was charmed.

Then came the challenge of securing transportation to the Madre de Dios River where they were to catch a boat that would take them on this journey of discovery.

Throughout her presentation, FitzGerald spoke in a calm, careful manner with a smile that seldom left her face as she explained that the trip and the itinerary she crafted from guide books were her ideas of how to get the most out of this chapter of their lives. Fitz was happy to oblige his bride. As a reporter for a newspaper in Danbury, Connecticut, he would be documenting the trip for his newspaper while she would be the photojournalist. She also kept a personal diary or log that would turn out to be their story of surviving what was to come.

There was a plane crash into a penal colony, of which she told Fitz, "People will not believe this at home," with her lilting laughter. Then there was the rafting.

FitzGerald often referred to their youth as a major contributing factor as to how and why they took chances to try and complete the trip, even after learning they had missed the boat they planned to take. There wouldn't be another opportunity for a motorized trip for three months, and the rainy season was upon them.

Why not attempt rafting? They were encouraged to travel as the locals did by raft.

"I got excited," FitzGerald said. "A raft. What a great idea!" She added, "Fitz was in full Huck Finn mode."

With leftover rafts and materials readily available in the village, the young couple put one together.

"People sat on the banks watching us," she said. "We were their entertainment."

The local harbormaster gave them a license to operate the raft because, "Rafting didn't require any skill or training." After securing a few supplies and finishing the raft, including a pink plastic shelter they dubbed "the pink palace," Fitz pushed the raft into the current with a 10-foot long pole and they were off.

"The first four days were wonderful – paradise – we saw birds and butterflies," FitzGerald recalled. "The sun was shining." But it was the rainy season; there wasn't any solid ground. The tree canopies were then full of animals, snakes, all manner of wildlife avoiding the flooded ground. Then the storm came.

The FitzGeralds would spend the next 26 days trying to stay out of the floodwaters that they knew were filled with life-threatening creatures. "We were outnumbered," she chuckled.

FitzGerald described one particularly horrifying experience that still haunts her.

"We became covered in bees." She said that one day they were suddenly swarmed by hundreds of bees. "The more we tried to get them off, the more they bit us," she said. They discovered that by lying still inside their enclosure, the bees seemed less excited, yet, "They covered us like blankets." She said Fitz asked her, "Are they eating us?" She replied, "I think they are licking our sweat."

FitzGerald ended her presentation there with her wry sense of humor, saying, "Maybe you'll read the book and get us out of there."

During the Q & A that followed, FitzGerald said she always thought Fitz would write the book. "He was the writer," after all. She said they were approached by several writers wanting to take on their story, but her response was, "No, if anyone was going to tell the story I would." And what a story she wrote.

FitzGerald was encouraged by her children to write a book, and one suspects it was for the love of family that she eventually did. She said she took a short course on memoir writing adding, "At one point, I had been an English major ... it was a good challenge."

While the theme is one of survival, a young couple nearing death with each day that passes, it is also very much a love story – the love two people can draw upon when faced with insurmountable odds.

Fitz stood in the back of the room during the nearly hour-long presentation, a silent sentinel watching his wife enjoy her time in the limelight. When approached for a few comments, he shared that when they had met the tribal chief, he gifted Fitz with a fan made of beautiful bird feathers. He said they also planned a picture-taking session with the chief and his tribe. When the couple arrived, they found the chief had dispensed with his loincloth and donned western clothing much to their disappointment.

"Holly doesn't read any reviews, but I do." Fitz shared. He said he gets frustrated when people comment about the lack of photographs documenting those trying days as they fought to simply stay alive. "It's a 'selfie' world today." As he looked over to where his wife was fielding one-on-one questions and signing books, he said, "Taking photographs was the last thing on our minds. We were just trying to live!"

Earthquake Rumbles Mattapoisett Area

By Jean Perry

A small earthquake Saturday night has been confirmed by the United States Geological Survey and widely discussed on social media by residents of Fairhaven and parts of Mattapoisett who felt the slight rumble and heard the explosion-like sound.

The 1.6 magnitude quake was centered one kilometer north of Fairhaven and happened at 11:09:53 local time at a depth of 1.6 kilometers, says the data from the USGS website.

The last documented earthquake felt in this area was a 2.3 magnitude quake centered two kilometers southwest of Providence, Rhode Island on July 22, 2015 at 7:43 am.

Selectmen Approve Cell Phone Policy

Marion Board of Selectmen

By Jean Perry

The Marion Board of Selectmen on October 3 approved a new cell phone policy for Council on Aging van drivers, and they will proceed to eventually establish a town-wide employee policy on cell phone use during work.

According to Town Administrator Paul Dawson, COA Director Heather Sylvia requested the policy in light of some grants the COA had applied for that mandated a cell phone use policy for drivers.

"This suggested [draft] policy is sort of mission critical at this point in time," Dawson said. "It would be our recommendation to ask the board to approve the policy tonight for the COA," adding, "but it begs the larger question for a cell phone policy for all Town departments..."

Dawson said one is in the works that would encompass the procedures in the COA driver policy and cover certain areas such as social media more broadly.

The COA driver policy prohibits the use of PDAs and cell phones, both handheld and hands-free, while operating a vehicle. It also prohibits initiating or responding to calls and reading texts or emails while driving. Making emergency calls must be made while the vehicle is pulled over, and employees charged with traffic violations that result from PDA or cell phone use while driving will be held solely responsible for all liabilities that result.

Employees found in violation of the policy will be subject to discipline, including termination of employment.

"[It's] critical that we have these policies in place," said Dawson.

In other matters, Dawson said Engine 1 was involved in a minor traffic accident on the evening of September 25 at 8:00 pm on Cove Street.

During an in-progress training drill, Engine 1 was called to a medical incident with an EMT and paramedic on board. The engine was alerted that vehicles were parked on both sides of Cove Street at that time, and during an attempt to pass with just 1 to 1.5 inches of space on either side, the engine sideswiped a parked car while travelling at a slow speed.

"All the damage appears to be very minor in nature," said Dawson. The staff followed the proper procedure and notified the Police Department, as well as Fire Chief Brian Jackvony who responded to the scene.

"Thank God it's very minor," said Selectman Steve Gonsalves sitting in as chairman for an absent Jody Dickerson that night.

In other business, Dawson said the Town's website has been updated and within a short while any glitches should work themselves out.

Dawson called the new format "user-friendly," saying, "I'm very pleased with it and we've been working hard ... on something that I think our residents will enjoy and probably get through really easily."

Also during the meeting, the board tabled until the article on October 2 with the Board of Selectmen during its meeting with the town moderator to discuss the warrant, receiving advice on how to form a motion on the town meeting floor.

Six articles appear on the warrant, with Article 6 proposing to amend the Town's solar bylaw to prohibit large-scale, ground-mounted solar arrays within 1,000 feet of a State or Town designated scenic road "...unless existing topographic features of the landscape preclude observation of the solar arrays from the scenic road."

The change, which would require a 2/3 vote to amend the zoning bylaw, comes as a result of abutter opposition to the pending Borrego Solar Systems, Inc. project slated for Rounseville Road at Mendell Road.

There on behalf of the over 100 supporters who had signed the citizen's petition was Sara Johnston. "It's me by default," she told the board.

Town Moderator Kirby Gilmore, the selectmen, as well as Town Counsel Blair Bailey then advised Johnston on how to make a motion on the town meeting floor and the order by which steps must be taken in order to amend the article.

"If you're not certain, I will coach you," Gilmore assured Johnston. "If I'm not nervous, then you certainly shouldn't be nervous."

On Tuesday, October 10, the Planning Board will hold the public hearing for the solar bylaw amendment article.

Also featured on the Special Town Meeting Warrant: Article 1 is to accept MGL Chapter 59, Section 57A pertaining to interest on unpaid tax bills under $100; Article 2 is to appropriate $30,000 to fund the negotiated police union contract for FY 2017; Article 3 to appropriate $60,000 to supplement the police budget to fund a negotiated police union contract; Article 4 to appropriate $10,000 for the police FY 2017 budget for additional staffing; Article 5 to appropriate $2,400 into the planning board budget to hire a part-time recording secretary.

Also during the meeting, Town Administrator Suzanne Szyndlar broke down the nearly $1.7 million in state grants the Town will receive for the transition to the regional 911 system: $400,000 is designated for design and architectural services, $119,000 is designated for

Contractor Offers Mea Culpa

Mattapoisett Planning Board

By Marilou Newell

When Mattapoisett Tree Warden Roland Cote recently passed a construction site on North Street, he was surprised to find all the trees and a historic stone wall removed. On October 2, Cote went before the members of the Mattapoisett Planning Board to describe the clear cutting, accompanied by Tree Committee Chairman Sandy Hering and Highway Superintendent Barry Denham.

Coming forward on behalf of the contractor performing the work at 167 North Street was Lee Castagnetti of Long Built Homes. Castagnetti began first by saying, "I'm here with deep apologies. We were not aware it was a scenic highway or that we'd violated any regulations. My apologies can't reverse that, but we are here to provide a remedy."

The degree of damage was then brought to light as Cote said at least nine mature pine trees and two ash trees along with a stone wall he described as having been in place since "King George's time" had been removed.

Acting Planning Board Chairman Nathan Ketchell asked Castagnetti how many homes Long Built had constructed in Mattapoisett. Castagnetti was unsure.

Cote said, "I was surprised what happened to the trees. I brought Mike Gagne (town administrator) to look. He knows someone at Long Built." He said the Town was looking at having the trees replaced along with the stone wall.

Denham presented a driveway plan that the Highway Department had approved showing the stone wall and trees were to have remained in place. He also explained that a drainage swale critical to proper stormwater management on the roadway had been disrupted. "It looks strange when you drive down the street now with the stone walls and trees all gone," he said.

Hering said the Tree Committee was ready to work with Cote and Long Built to develop a planting plan to "naturalize the site."

Cote said that first the swale and stone wall would have to be repaired, and then the trees planted.

Planning Board member Janice Robbins asked, "Who's the responsible party?"

Castagnetti responded, "It was our action. We accept responsibility for the misdeed. We should have understood what was to have been done."

Robbins asked, "What about the property owners?" It was ascertained that the property owners had not been contacted regarding the matter, but Planning Board Administrator Mary Crain said she would contact them.

Ketchell suggested that Castagnetti look at historic pictures of the area to determine how the stone wall should be placed along the property line and North Street, and asked him to return on October 16 with a plan for the stone wall and swale and to move forward working with Cote and Hering on tree planting.

Earlier in the evening, the board re-opened a

The board spent two hours discussing waivers requested by Al Ewing of Ewing Engineering that would have approved the construction of a 16-foot wide gravel roadway with a hammerhead turn-around for the single-family home planned for the lot.

But forward movement slowed to a snail's pace as the board members labored over regulations governing lot subdivision, the proposed waivers, and future development that might take place beyond the scope of the current application.

Robbins was insistent that the proposed road necessary to give the lot frontage was adequate, especially when considering any future additional development that might take place on the large parcel. "Why should we be approving a driveway as a road?" She said there were no guarantees that 40B housing would not be planned in the future that would ultimately render the proposed roadway insufficient.

Board member Gail Carlson voiced her concerns as well, saying, "I'm looking at the slope of the gravel road and the width."

Ewing said the approved zoning and permitting had been for a single lot, single-family home, and that included water and sewer permits.

Robbins countered, "But that's not cast in stone. The road could be extended to create frontage." She said, "We're signing off on a sub-standard road ... It's a driveway."

As the hearing continued, the board members debated the merits of four pages of waiver requests, returning repeatedly to the topic of the lack of a stormwater drainage plan.

Crain shared a letter she had received from Fire Chief Andrew Murray commenting that the roadway with hammerhead turn-around was acceptable as proposed. But Robbins said she needed clarification regarding clearing around the hammerhead and the need to ensure that area could support heavy emergency vehicles.

Regarding other requested waivers, the board members allowed underground utilities to be placed in the middle of the roadway, while waiving parking, sidewalks, easements, and open space requirements.

Ewing was asked to return with drainage calculations for stormwater management, and plan modifications that included swales and clarification on clearance for the hammerhead.

The next meeting of the Mattapoisett Planning Board is scheduled for October 16 at 7:00 pm in the Mattapoisett Town Hall conference room.

the process of reviewing current fee structures and the implementation of new or additional fees during the October 3 meeting.

Conservation Agent Laurell Farinon provided fee structure data from surrounding cities and towns as a starting point for the commissioners, saying "Fees are all over the place."

Farinon said that currently there is only a $25 fee to cover the cost of publishing public hearing notices in The Wanderer for Requests of Determination of Applicability.

Regarding Notices of Intent filings, depending on the type of construction being proposed and whether the project fell into the commercial or residential category, fees are anywhere from $100 to $500 with the state taking a portion of those fees collected.

Farinon suggested that the commission consider instituting a new "after-the-act" filing fee, possibly double the regular filing fee. She said that any suggested fee changes would have to go before the Board of Selectmen and the Finance Committee, but not Town Meeting.

Commissioner Laurene Gerrior asked, "What are we trying to do with fees?"

Farinon said the commission could be proactive with fees to cover operating costs incurred by the commission.

Gerrior thought that funds collected might be used to help manage and maintain Town-owned open spaces, while commissioner Daniel Gagne thought funds should be used in the management of wetlands, such as invasive species eradication.

The commission asked Farinon to prepare a spreadsheet of possible fee changes for their review and further consideration.

The commission also discussed the new part-time position of recording secretary that they had previously voted to move forward with and request funding for.

Farinon had been asked to provide supporting documentation regarding overtime and what work wasn't getting done.

Farinon responded, "The position is treading water," and, although work was getting done such as meeting minutes and agendas, the crush was very real and of a long-standing nature. Currently the same secretary is responsible for attending Conservation Commission and Planning Board meetings as the recording secretary.

A sum of $2,500 had been suggested by Farinon for the position, and this would come in front of voters at Town Meeting, she said. Rochester's Fall Special Town Meeting is scheduled for October 23.

Earlier in the evening, Daniel and Deborah Clark of 240 Mary's Pond Road came before the commission to defend their request for a Certificate of Compliance that had been originally requested during the September 19 meeting, but declined pending their appearance.

Chairman Michael Conway had asked the homeowners to come before the commission to explain why the plan of record had not been followed and why modification had not first been vetted with Farinon.

Mr. Clarke said, "We thought we were following the rules, but mistakes were made." He continued, "The first mistake was not checking the plan of record." He said, if he had he done that, the issue of a lack in sufficient coverage for a portion of the foundation would have been noted.

The second mistake, he said, was "I didn't fully appreciate the Order of Conditions regarding the one hundred-foot buffer zone." Clarke listed four changes to the plan: steps to a shop; placement of a generator; openings in a stone wall; and slight relocation of parking area. "I should have come to Laurell ... I'm sorry."

Conway asked if he had read the Order of Conditions. Clarke replied, "Not fully."

Conway commented, "People take these permits too lightly."

Mrs. Clarke asked, "We had no intention to do anything wrong ... What can we do now?"

Conway turned to Farinon who said, "We're here for a Certificate of Compliance. Changes were made, but the project turned out well... There's no other way to travel on this ... I recommend a Certificate of Compliance be issued."

The commission approved the request.

The next meeting of the Rochester Conservation Commission is scheduled for October 17 at 7:00 pm in the town hall meeting room.

Candy Controversy Continues

Marion Planning Board

By Sarah French Storer

Despite the chilly fall air outside, it was hot inside the Marion Town House Annex on Monday night as sparks flew during the Marion Planning Board's discussion of modifications to the Special Permit for Patrick's Candy Pantry.

Planning Board Chairman Eileen Marum began the discussion, with the applicant Brian Kelly's son Patrick and his friend Zak Koplen on speakerphone, by reading a detailed statement enumerating her concerns about the proposed changes to the permit.

The proposal from Kelly is to park a vintage Good Humor ice cream truck at Rooney's Barber Shop, the current location of the Candy Pantry. The truck is intended as a novelty advertisement for the establishment.

Marum cited her concerns primarily about safety and the existing traffic hazard of the intersection of Spring Street and Route 6 where the shop is located. The Special Permit that was granted July 10 allowed for the sale of candy, and after a written request by Kelly in early August, Marum had granted with a letter the sale of prepackaged ice cream from inside the shop.

At the Planning Board's August 24 meeting, it was decided that if Kelly wanted to sell ice cream from the truck, he would need to reapply to the entire board. However, the board seemed unsure if the parking of the ice cream truck was within its purview.

Marum expressed her concern about the safety of pedestrians and patrons seated at picnic tables located at the site, saying, "There is no plan to keep pedestrians and cars separate, to keep pedestrians safe ... only a thin strip of shrubs to protect picnic tables..." Marum referred to the application of the Buzzards Bay Coalition for their property across Spring Street from the barber shop, saying that a previous board member had great concerns about the safety of the intersection.

At this point in the meeting, board member Chris

Collings' level of frustration with the discussion was evident in his question to Marum. "Can we have that testimony directly?" he asked, adding that Marum "better hurry up" when she demanded to finish her statement.

The discussion was no less heated as Marum finished reading her lengthy and thorough illustration of her safety concerns and stated that she wanted a traffic study by a civil or traffic engineer before allowing any more changes to the Special Permit.

Collings demanded there be a discussion of the matter, which board member Will Saltonstall began by saying to Marum, "This is your opinion; obviously, a strong opinion. I understand the traffic concerns, but I respectfully disagree. I don't think there's imminent danger." Saltonstall added, "If we put up walls between all cars and pedestrians, we'd live in a world of walls!"

Board member Jennifer Francis expressed her concern that the board was overreaching in their role, saying, "[It's] not really in our purview ... as long as they are not selling ice cream."

Board member Norm Hills suggested resolving the safety concerns by placing bollards or concrete planters between the parking spaces and the picnic tables.

Steve Kokkins, Planning Board vice chairman, expressed his concern that parking the truck at the site was an "end run around the signage practices in town." He agreed that it was a dangerous intersection, referring to Oxford Creamery in Mattapoisett as a similar scenario.

Andrew Daniel, the newest board member, said he had visited the Oxford Creamery site and believed they had no safety issues there, despite having a hot dog stand in one end of their parking lot. He also had spoken with the building inspector and the ZBA, both of whom had stated the signage on the truck did not violate the signage bylaw.

Marum continued to express not only her safety concerns, but also her displeasure at how Kelly had what she described as "a pattern of behavior."

"They have not been upfront ... I have a trust issue," Marum said.

Collings expressed his dismay over the entire discussion, asking Marum, "What is the problem here? I will not condone or support a punitive approach ... No reason whatsoever not to vote and approve this project. If he chooses to sell ice cream next month, he can ask us."

Marum repeated that her issue was safety, and Saltonstall suggested that the Town "balance public safety with the older sites that exist in Marion."

The board concluded its discussion by suggesting that the Special Permit be modified by adding the term "pre-packed ice cream" in addition to candy and removing any mention of an ice cream truck. Planning Board administrator Terri Santos informed the board that they will need to hold a public hearing in order to make the changes, which the board will schedule as soon as possible.

In other business, the board voted to approve both the final draft of the Town Master Plan as well as the Codification amending the Town zoning bylaws, in preparation for the Fall Special Town Meeting. There will be an informational meeting on Saturday, October 14 to answer questions about the Master Plan.

The next meeting of the Marion Planning Board is scheduled for October 16 at 7:00 pm at the Marion Town House.

September 27 didn't have any public hearings scheduled, but it did have in its possession a letter from the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection upholding the commission's April 22 denial to allow Michael Popitz of 18 Indian Cove Way to construct a driveway and associated grading through a bordering vegetative wetland in order to provide access to an upper lot for future development.

Popitz, a Planning Board member at the time of his original February 8 hearing date, filed the appeal with the DEP and published a letter to the editor in the April 6 edition of The Wanderer insinuating that the Conservation Commission unfairly denies projects within wetlands to some, but allows certain other projects in town to move forward.

Near that time, Popitz also filed a complaint on June 20 with the Attorney General's Office alleging violations of the Open Meeting Law over the timeliness of the release of meeting minutes, which was also dismissed in a letter from the AG's Office dated September 6.

The letter signed by DEP Wetlands and Waterways Chief James Mahala states that Popitz already has a driveway through wetlands on the abutting property he owns, that the alternative analysis that was prepared considered not building the driveway, acquiring additional land, or constructing a shared driveway, and concludes that the project as proposed did not demonstrate a viable alternative to access the upper lot without altering the wetlands.

"Instead, the alternatives analysis identifies an alternative that impacts BVD and further fragments a wetland system to gain access to the same portion of the property currently served by the existing driveway," states the letter.

The AG Office letter found that the commission had satisfied its obligation to approve meeting minutes in a timely manner and no violation was found since two of the meeting minutes in Popitz's complaint were all filed the next month, and two subsequent meeting minutes were still pending within only one to two months before Popitz filed the complaint.

Social Media Creates Stir Over Bus Company

Joint Meeting of the School Committees

By Jean Perry

Social media has been active lately, said Rochester representative of the ORR School Committee, as he raised "serious" parent and community concerns over the school district's bus company during the September 28 joint meeting of the ORR School Committee and the combined Mattapoisett, Marion, and Rochester School Committees.

"What I saw and what I was hearing and what people were telling me is basically tarnishing the school's reputation," said Joseph Pires. Once he spoke with Superintendent Doug White about the matter, Pires said he felt compelled to take a closer look at the schools' contracted bus company, Braga Transportation.

Pires did not provide specific details on the issue he was talking about, leaving members of other Tri-Town school committees wondering what happened.

To fill the reader in, the Facebook group "Rochester, MA" has featured several posts over the past week concerning the firing of Ralph Stinson, a bus driver formerly employed by Braga who drove Rochester's Bus 5 for 27 years. Scores of Rochester parents, some of them past passengers of Stinson's, have rallied their support behind Stinson, pressing for an investigation into Braga's firing of Stinson. Hundreds of comments appear on the original post, most of them expressing shock and vehement support of Stinson, who commented on the post that he himself was never provided an adequate explanation for his firing.

Signs have started dotting the Rochester landscape along the Bus 5 route in support of Stinson, as many are still seeking answers.

"Many parents were upset about that," said Pires, "but that's not the issue I want to talk about." What Pires is concerned about most, he said, is Braga's alleged silence in response to parents' requests for information and an investigation into Stinson's firing.

"Parents are very, very upset. They really want to see this fixed," said Pires. "Accountability is a really big issue with me."

School contracts for transportation must have protocols imbedded, said Pires reading a letter he wrote to White openly before the committee members about what he called "a failure from our current bus company Braga Transportation to respond to a complaint from one of our Tri-Town parents."

"This and other issues have now raised serious concerns and doubt on the safety of our children," Pires stated, adding, "I question Braga ... and their ability to deliver a high standard of performance and reliability and safety."

Pires requested a task force or subcommittee be formed to investigate the bus company.

"We cannot ignore signs [and] indicators that suggest problems now and into the future with Braga Transportation," said Pires. "I feel as though this is a serious matter when a parent complains and it goes ignored for quite some time. I can only say, imagine if it was your child?"

Addressing the committee members, Pires said, "This committee could be part of the solution or it could be part of the problem, but we can't ignore it."

Pires suggested inviting a Braga representative to a future meeting.

Marion School Committee Chairman Christine Marcolini said this was the first she had heard of any problems with the transportation company.

"One child was ignored," Pires told her, "and ... my doubt or concern is, what else are they ignoring?"

ORR School Committee member Heather Burke agreed that it is important to investigate every complaint or concern, adding, "If we do form such a task force ... we really have to go into it with an open mind and probe all sides.... It has to be an open and honest inquiry."

"A parent asked something of the bus company," said ORR School Committee Chairman Tina Rood. "This is a particular issue for Rochester."

White said transportation contracts are a complex structure, with each individual town signing its own contract with a bus company; all Tri-Town school districts just happened to sign a contract with the same bus company.

"What may be happening in one community isn't necessarily in another," said White. "In our structure, it's hard for us to figure out how the best way [to go about this] is."

Marion School Committee member Michelle Smith said she has seen the comments on social media.

"It's all over social media," Smith said. "Things said about Doug, it's disheartening. It's very upsetting." The social media platform might be an open forum, she said, but as a committee, "... how can we diffuse this situation?"

Burke wondered why, if so many parents were concerned, they had not attended that night's meeting.

"Why are they not here to address their concerns with the committee?" she asked. "I know we had an issue with social media last winter that was never substantiated and it caused chaos."

ORR School Committee member Jim Muse said he thought individual parents contacting the bus company before attempting to contact the school was the inappropriate avenue for lodging a complaint, and Pires accused Muse of "minimizing" the issue.

"Minimizing what?" said Muse.

"You're saying that it's a story, but it's factual," said Pires. "A complaint came in and it was ignored for ... a year!"

Pires turned to White for affirmation. "Doug, was there a complaint?"

"There was information that was brought forward," White said. "Our job ... is to ensure that every child is being transported. That was not being met."

Braga has certain obligations in its contract, said White, and the school districts have the authority "to ask for change if not delivering services," White stated.

Speaking as a parent, Pires said, "There's an uncertainty and an unsettling feeling that if I put a complaint with this bus company ... that complaint's going to that company... That company is responsible for handling that complaint. That didn't happen. If a company can't do its job by handling a complaint ... there is a concern on legality and other issues."

The goal, Pires said, is simply to regain the trust.

"It's unfair that the school is taking a hit really on its reputation and, if we don't act accordingly, it's going to be a landslide," said Pires.

Rood said she has also requested to review the contract with Braga, adding that the discussion will likely take place during the Rochester School Committee meeting on October 12.

"I think that's where it probably needs to begin," said Rood.

Pires said that if people had known the topic would be discussed that night then parents would have attended the joint meeting.

Pires specified that he was not criticizing bus drivers, but rather the Braga administration. Muse went on the record to say that in all his years as a school committee member, he has known nothing but excellent service from Braga.

"I haven't been aware of any other issues," said Rochester School Committee member Robin Rounseville, "not to say that this doesn't need to be investigated..." Rounseville said that taking the matter up in Rochester is the way to go.

The next meeting of the ORR and Superintendents Union joint school committees is scheduled for December 14 at 6:30 pm in the ORRJHS media room.

of the returning groups this year is the high school's Community Service Learning club, led by science teacher Heidi Graser.

"Last Thursday, we had a meet and greet after school to try and get new members interested in the club," Graser said. "The older members brought in refreshments, and we all made kindness rocks that will either be placed around the community or used to start our own little garden of kindness."

The idea brought over a dozen students to the room for the club's second official meeting of the year.

"Involvement was a little low last year, but it looks like participation will be increasing a lot," said member Hanil Kang.

New club member Maggie Farrell said, "Recently, I've helped out at a bake sale at ORR to raise money and awareness for hurricane relief down in the Caribbean, and I heard about Community Service club through some of my friends who had done it in the past." She continued, "I decided I wanted to join when they told me about all of the different events that the club is involved with to help out our local community."

At the meeting, members of the Community Service Learning club were informed how to self-log their volunteer hours over a twelve-month span. Depending on the amount of time they spend giving back to the community, students could qualify for National Service Awards that acknowledge their service.

Possible community service occasions were passed around at the meeting as well. The assembled group watched a video from the "Message of Hope" organization in preparation for donating volunteer hours to their cause. Students signed up to help pack Message of Hope goodie bags for children in hospitals on one of the following club dates.

"I think giving back to the community is very important," commented senior Fiona Lant, who has been part of the club since her sophomore year. "It's great to be a part of a group of people who all share that idea and work together to promote it."

Special Olympics Partnership a Win-Win at Tabor

High School Sports Update

By Jonathan Comey

When the Tabor Academy Special Olympics club was started by popular student Molly Bend two years ago, no one knew how it would go.

The answer? Better than anyone could have imagined.

From humble beginnings, the club now has a 10-member student board, is seeking national status, and gets so many volunteers for their Sunday training sessions that only the first 20 get accepted.

"I think it's just something about the Tabor community," said junior Tali O'Leary, a Marion resident and three-sport athlete at Tabor who is a member of the club board. "Once one person heard about it, it just passed by word of mouth and has just grown and grown."

The board came up with a list of bylaws, which go toward the goal of "leadership through positive action and reinforcement," as O'Leary puts it. "I think that sports give you something special. I know for me, it's an emotional thing. I get stressed, I go on a run, or play soccer for my friends."

And for the young Special Olympians, most of whom are working toward the goal of independent living as adults, "It keeps you on schedule, and I think it really builds structure," O'Leary said.

On Friday, the school hosted a large regional Special Olympics event for young kids as well as high school athletes from unified teams at Old Rochester and other SouthCoast schools. The Special Olympians got to work on training techniques in football and basketball, run relays, and just generally have a blast as the school took the day off from classes to focus on positive community events.

Annaliza Souza, a Tabor senior who plays basketball and tennis, is on the board, and while her role in the School Day Games was administrative, she heard a great story of bonding.

"We had a freshman who really hadn't had a chance to get involved with much, and she was paired up with a little girl athlete for the day," Souza said. "And at the end of it, the girl's parents said that it was the best day of her life."

The success of the Special Olympics club has grown from the Sunday sessions, and it now includes a Polar Plunge that last year raised about $12,000 for Special Olympics and will be repeated again this winter.

"I think the thing is that when someone gets into volunteering even once, that's all it takes," Souza said. "It's just instant."

Here is a look at what's happening this week at Old Rochester, Old Colony and Tabor:

MOVIE REVIEW

Take A Bite

By Rob Gonsalves
www.robsmovievault.com

Inhumanwich! Starring Matt Laumann and Michael Peake. Directed by David Cornelius. Running time: 73 minutes. No MPAA rating. Available to stream now on Amazon, iTunes, and Google Play.

"In Soviet Russia, sandwich eats you!" is not a joke featured in the retro sci-fi/horror tribute Inhumanwich! (pronounced IN-hyoo-MAN-wich), but there are plenty of other jokes. The movie, shot in golden-oldie black and white, concerns an astronaut whose sloppy joe sandwich combines with radiation to turn him into a rapidly growing monster made of meat. This is the kind of knowingly daffy premise that can go south — and sour — but writer/director David Cornelius strikes a light tone early on and delivers, as I said, a tribute to schlock of the '50s, not a callow put-down. If you're too hip for ridiculous big-monster movies, why put in the years of work to make one? To show the world you're better than the movie you just made? Cornelius, in contrast, is not too hip for those movies or for his own movie. He loves them as I do, and his affection is infectious.

I don't know for sure (but he'll probably tell me) exactly which creature-double-features Cornelius is referencing, but I'll take a stab and say Inhumanwich! is The Blob by way of The Incredible Melting Man (or, if you want to be fancy, First Man into Space), with elements and tropes from however many hours of snowy TV young Cornelius sat in front of. (There also seem to be fun nudges in the ribs of John Carpenter's The Thing and the infamous Arch Oboler radio play "Chicken Heart.") Astronaut Joe Neumann (amiably played by Jacques "Jake" Ransom before he turns into a blob of beef) terrorizes the Cincinnati countryside after his rocket crash-lands, and it's up to the usual team of soldiers and scientists to stop it before it engulfs the planet.

Cornelius and editor Matt Gray keep Inhumanwich! sprinting (and short — the film crosses the finish line at an hour thirteen, including credits). As the old-timers who made stuff like Them! and Tarantula knew, you don't want to give the audience a lot of time to think during your movie about killer turnips or whatever, and Cornelius also knows what the soul of wit is. (Look for his cameo as a Jordy Verrill-type gentleman who encounters the monster in the woods.) The scenes are clipped to punch up the punchlines; this good-hearted comedy boasts a good deal of technical savvy, of the sort that's invisible when it's working. There's a bit about a character who repeats everything she hears during a phone chat, which would make a goofy sort of sense if we were just hearing her side of the conversation and we were getting exposition from it; but we also see the other side of the talk via split screen, so the redundancy becomes a surreal joke. It's one of several gags in Inhumanwich! that you just know started with Cornelius watching some forlorn excuse for a movie with buddies and saying "Wouldn't it be funny if..."

The performers are mostly encouraged to mimic the unhip flatness of '50s sci-fi actors. The movie doesn't confine itself to any one era, though; some of the signifiers announce themselves as from the '50s, some from modern times. To that end, Jake Robinson's stogie-chewing, growling General Graham seems to channel John Belushi's Wild Bill Kelso and the uncouth soldiers of Day of the Dead, moreso than the rigid military men you'd find in antique schlock. He seems to be of the '70s and '80s, whereas a later character (Brad Nicholas), whose competitive abilities might be of some use against the monster, seems of more recent vintage. Cornelius mashes up the decades as if to say that some things in the universe remain constant, such as humanity's response to a killer pile of ground beef. Inhumanwich! is just the brand of inspired nonsense we need at the moment.

dramatically change, this could be my highest scoring offense that I've ever had here. They're putting up incredible numbers."

The team is a perennial postseason player, but this year they have been scoring goals at a remarkable clip led by the terrific trio up front of Maddie Demanche (junior), Jillian Kutash (junior) and Meg Hughes (sophomore).

"All three of them would be a top scorer on a normal team, and they're all looking for each other," Lombard said. "It makes it difficult for teams to focus on one."

Senior midfielders Maddie Cooney and Leah Przybyszewski, along with Mary Butler, are also key parts of the engine for the 9-0 Bulldogs.

When you're undefeated, sometimes it's hard for a coach to find room for improvement, but Lombard actually feels his team's unselfishness can go too far.

"Believe it or not, a lot of goals have gone unscored because the girls are working so hard to set someone else up," he said. "They have such great skill, and they want to get everyone involved. We're a difficult team to match up against. The key is us playing smart."

The boys' soccer team led by Ben Lafrance has won four straight and is unbeaten in its last eight to go to 4-1-4 with a big win over Voc-Tech.

ORR's football team also keeps cruising, at 4-0 after a solid second half keyed a 30-14 road win over Dighton-Rehoboth. The Bulldogs are averaging 35.5 points per game; they host Somerset Berkley on Friday

OBITUARIES

Constance "Connie" (Griego) Cestari
November 7, 1931 to September 26, 2017

On September 26, 2017, Connie Cestari, most recently of Mattapoisett, Massachusetts, passed away peacefully, in the company of her son. She was the wife of the late Arnold J. Cestari, Sr., and mother of Attorney Arnold J. Cestari, Jr. and his significant other Attorney Alysia Letiziano-Wolfskeil of Mattapoisett, Massachusetts and Boynton Beach, Florida. She was the sister of Marie Caporale of Boynton Beach, Florida, and daughter of the late Dominic and Laura Griego. She was also the mother of Mark R. Cestari of Newton, Massachusetts, as well as grandmother to his sons, Calvin and Craig Cestari.

Connie was born in New Haven, Connecticut on November 7, 1931. She spent the majority of her life in Southern Connecticut. She later relocated to Mattapoisett, Massachusetts, as well as Boynton Beach, Florida. Most recently, she returned to Mattapoisett to live with her son while under Hospice care.

Early in her life, Connie worked in both the education, and banking fields. In her middle aged years, she was a successful real estate agent for the H. Pearce Company in Branford, Connecticut, until her retirement.

Connie was active her entire life in both civic and political activities. She served as a research assistant to the Connecticut General Assembly in the mid 1970's and was elected as the first female Republican Party Chairman for the Town of North Branford, Connecticut. She later was elected to serve as a member of the Town of Branford Representative Town Meeting, as well as the Branford Board of Assessors, along with that town's Republican Town Committee. She was the campaign coordinator in Connecticut for Senator/Governor Lowell Weicker and former President, George H.W. Bush. After relocating to Massachusetts, she was elected to serve as Chairman of the Mattapoisett Republican Town Committee, as well as serving as State Representative to the Mattapoisett Housing Authority. During that time, she was also active in the Mattapoisett Women's Club. After relocating to South Florida in 1998, she was elected to the Palm Beach Republican Executive Committee and was also the Director and member of the Boynton Beach Florida Republican Women's Club. She also served as a member of the Republican Club of Palm Beach and the Boca Raton Republican Women's Club.

She will be missed dearly by those whom she touched, both in her personal life, as well as through her various political endeavors and associations. The wall of her home was filled with photos of her with the many national political figures she got to meet and know on a personal basis over the course of her lifetime, including Presidents, Congressmen, Senators, and various candidates for political office. She will also be missed at the various Palm Beach Republican Party functions that she attended regularly and her seat at those events will be as empty as the hearts of those around her who grew to appreciate her company, passion for politics, and inquisitive nature.

Special thanks to all that provided care to Connie during her period of failing health by both Trust Bridge Hospice of Palm Beach, as well as Community Nurse Home Care of Fairhaven, MA.

A memorial service as well as a gathering of her friends to celebrate Connie's life will be held in Florida at a later date. Her Graveside Service will be held on Thursday, October 5th at 12 Noon at All Saints Cemetery in North Haven, CT. In lieu of flowers, her son requests that donations be made in her name to either Trust Bridge Hospice, 5300 East Avenue, West Palm Beach, FL 33407 or to Community Nurse Home Care, P.O. Box 751, Fairhaven, MA 02719.

Arrangements are by the Saunders-Dwyer Mattapoisett Home for Funerals, 50 County Rd., Mattapoisett. For Connie's online condolence book, please visit www.saunders-dwyer.com.

Ellen M. Fitzgerald, 89, (née O'Connor) of Fairhaven, MA, formerly of Greenville, SC died, September 16, 2017 of complications from Alzheimer's. Ellen grew up in Blakely, PA, the daughter of Sadie (née Furey) and Frank M. O'Connor. Following graduation from Marywood College, she worked as registrar for Georgetown Preparatory School. While living in D.C., she met, Gene Fitzgerald, her husband of 63 years with whom she raised seven children.

In 1975, she and Gene settled in Greenville, SC, making lifelong friends and serving the community. Ellen worked at Greenville Memorial Hospital, and volunteered at Meals on Wheels and The Greenville Free Medical Clinic.

In their yearbook, her Marywood College classmates described her as "lovely to look at, delightful to know...gentle of speech...beneficent mind...refined gaiety, Ellen.

And she never changed.

Through her Greenville parishes, Prince of Peace, and later, St. Anthony of Padua, she found friendship and communities focused on aiding those in need.

Ellen found a true partner in Gene, their closeness and trust grounding the family.

Though the family moved frequently, one thing remained constant: Ellen's steady, nurturing presence. Her soft voice comforted, but could deliver disappointment as effectively as love. Tender, but strong. She shared her appreciation for the arts with her children and surrounded the family with books and books and more books. Ellen's door was always open and she welcomed everyone to join the table. Her large extended Irish clan taught her the value of family, which she passed down to her children and grandchildren.

Ellen's place was in the garden. She found peace in soil, roots, leaves and blossoms. She cared for her plants in much the same way she raised her children. Get them started, give plenty of room to spread, and adore them as they grow.

Giving you 'the loves' Mom, and one final tuck.

Survivors include her brothers, Rev. Frank O'Connor, S.J.; Jack O'Connor; and Tim O'Connor; children Tim, Gene (Anita Padilla-Fitzgerald), Maura (Craig Andrews), John, Ann (Michael Smarr), and Kate (Michael Sudofsky); grandchildren

Old Colony

The gameplan has changed this year for the Old Colony football team, and that's resulted in three straight wins and another winning season on the horizon.

The Cougars are 3-1 heading into Friday night's game at Bristol-Plymouth (7:00 pm), and they're doing it with a run-first approach that's a shift from the passing attack they employed with QB Jack Murphy behind center the past two years.

"We are much more run-oriented," said Coach Brandon Mendez. "We've been 55-45 percent pass to run, but it's definitely more run heavy. I think we're a lot more physical. We knew what type of team we had, and we're building around it."

The No. 1 building block is senior Jarred Gagne, who is the main ballcarrier on offense as the tailback and a real good kid, someone you feel good about having on your team."

Gagne had over 200 yards on 29 carries in the 28-8 win over South Shore Voke. Sophomore QB Matt Bumpus is more of a running threat than Murphy was, while Brad Plissey also gets touches in the run-and-pass game as the slot back.

On defense, Gagne, Bumpus and Plissey all contribute, but it's the defensive line of a "dominant" Ronnie Frates and versatile Joe Weigel that leads the way.

The boys' soccer team stood at 5-3 after a pair of big wins, 9-1 over Bristol Aggie and 2-0 over Tri-County, with Josh Vinagre and Hunter Soares notching goals.

The girls' volleyball team has been extremely good, running out to an 8-2 record in its first 10 games and looking like a lock for the tournament.

Tabor Academy

The move to the Independent Schools League this year has meant adjustments across the program, but it's also meant opportunities.

One of those came last weekend with Tabor's participation in a boys' soccer collegiate showcase geared toward giving college coaches a bulk look at the league's players. All 16 league members played at the same facility, and Tabor (1-4) put together one of their best efforts of the year in a 2-1 loss to unbeaten Belmont Hill.

Boys' soccer coach Ian Patrick said the Seawolves didn't show any nerves.

"If there was pressure of playing for their potential college coaches, I wouldn't say it was added pressure, it was a great opportunity," he said. "A couple of the kids definitely want to play college soccer, and this is a great chance to show what they can do."

It was the second straight week the team took part in a college showcase, having traveled to Connecticut previously.

Tabor now has 11 boys' soccer alumni playing in college, all at the Division 3 and Division 2 level, and senior Charlie Widing is likely to be added to that list next year.

"We're working toward getting some Division 1 players," Patrick said, "and joining this league will help us attract athletes while also pushing us to get better to keep pace."

The Tabor girls are 1-1-2, and Cat Berry is tied for the ISL scoring lead with 14 points. After a 5-5-2 season last year, they are looking to recapture the first-place magic of the 2015 season.

Tabor's football team was expecting some ups and downs in the adjustment to tougher competition in the ISL, and that came to pass last Friday with a 48-18 home loss to St. Sebastian's. The Seawolves (1-1) host Belmont Hill at 2:00 pm on Saturday.

TriTOWN HAPPENINGS

The Marion Natural History Museum's after school group enjoyed one of the last days of warm weather by using seining nets to investigate our local fish population. By far the most commonly caught animal was the Atlantic Silverside, and then in descending order mummichogs, shrimp, mud snails, and hermit crabs, with one or two small Menhaden. The kids cooled off in the water at the Marion Harbormaster's beach and enjoyed a lovely fall day. Many thanks to Maggie Payne for her help with the nets. Photo courtesy Elizabeth Leidhold

Sara Elizabeth Achorn of Rochester, an 18-year-old freshman attending Lesley University, impressed the judges with her confidence, public speaking abilities, stage presence, and passion for the city, earning her the highest number of points and the coveted Miss New Bedford title on Saturday September 30.

On September 28, the garden group of the Mattapoisett Woman's Club brought shovels, clippers, trowels, and rakes to the badly overgrown butterfly garden at Center School and cleared out the overgrowth and weeds. The garden will be dedicated to Suzanne Sylvester who along with two other teachers designed, planted, and used this garden to teach students about butterflies. Suzanne was a member of the Mattapoisett Woman's Club and garden group, and this endeavor is in memory of her. Photo courtesy Karen Gardner

Better Streetlights, Big Savings for Marion

Over 40 Massachusetts towns are in the process of converting their streetlights to LEDs (energy-sipping light-emitting diodes), and Marion aims to join the list. Our state offers grants to help towns convert old fixtures, which will save us over $18,000 per year in electricity and maintenance costs. In only about 4.3 years, these savings will pay for the conversion, after which the money will go straight to the plus side of the Town's budget.

SALOME'S STARS

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Someone has some suggestions to offer regarding your new project. You might find them helpful. Remember to avoid speculation and to stick with just the facts, Lamb.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An old friend suddenly reappears. Whether this proves to be a boon or a bane in the Bovine's life depends on the reason for this surprising reappearance. Be cautious.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Vital information finally emerges, allowing you to make that important personal decision. You can now move your focus to an upcoming professional development.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might not like seeing so many on-the-job changes. But some of them could open new opportunities for the Moon Child's talents to shine to your best advantage.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An apparently solid-gold opportunity beckons the Lion. But check to see if all that dazzle isn't just a sprinkling of surface glitter. Check it out before making a commitment.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A close friend could offer advice on how to handle a difficult family matter. But in the end, the decision has to be made based on what is best for you and those you love.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Family problems are best worked out with all those concerned contributing suggestions that will ease tensions. Stay with it until a workable solution is found.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Expect to hear more about an offer that has piqued your interest. You earn respect for insisting on solid facts, not just a fancy talk about potential opportunities.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) What seemed to be a reasonable workplace request might need to be defended. Don't fret. You have both the facts and a surprise ally on your side.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A bit of capriciousness might be just what you need. Plan to kick up your heels in a round of fun and games with family and friends this weekend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Although some of your plans might have to be put on hold, things do begin to take a turn for the better by midweek. Your financial crunch also eases.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your financial picture begins to brighten by week's end. There also are favorable changes in your personal life. Someone you care for has good news to report.

BORN THIS WEEK: You seek balance, but not at the expense of justice. You would make a fine judge.

Management Committee will ask Marion's residents to support an article that will provide $105,408 to convert our 330 streetlights to LEDs. This initial investment is required to be eligible for the state rebates. Once the conversion is completed, the state will reimburse us about $34,000, leaving approximately $78,000 to be paid back by the savings. Not only will we save money after the pay-back period, but the new LEDs are more reliable, improve visibility, reduce light pollution, and offer "smart" controls such as dimming and remote control.

The Town of Marion now receives a check for about $7,000 each month from Con Ed Solutions, a refund for obtaining our municipal power from wind turbines in Plymouth. So far, Marion has saved about $78,000 from this arrangement. The EMC proposes that these savings be reinvested by paying the up-front costs of the LED conversion program, which will add handsomely to the Town's energy savings.

Many of our neighboring towns are already taking advantage of this opportunity to save money and have better street lighting: Westport, Bourne, Falmouth, New Bedford, and Middleborough, to name only a few. It's time for Marion to join this enlightened list. Please come to Fall Town Meeting on October 23 (6:45 pm at Sippican School) and approve Article S3.

Tabor Academy to the Rescue

As part of the Tabor Academy 'Day of Service,' seven students – Gillan Campbell, Finn McCain, Tayler Rogers, Kyle Squires, Noah Tidus, Avaline Wilson, and Alex Zhang – along with teacher Roxie Bratton came to the trusts' assistance on September 30. They joined trust volunteers Art Benner, Bill Taylor, Bruce MacPhail, Mike Huguenin, Norene Hartley, Rosemary Smith, and David Smith in installing 150 feet of additional bridging. The young, energetic students were a huge help in moving the 8'x2"x10" planks a quarter-mile along the trail to the worksite where they joined the more senior volunteers in assembling the bridges. Some students enjoyed their first

Auditions will be held on Saturday, October 14, at 10:00 am, and on Sunday, October 15, at 7:00 pm, at the Marion Art Center, 80 Pleasant Street (the corner of Main and Pleasant Streets), in Marion. Performances will be Friday, December 8 and Saturday, December 9 at 7:30 pm and Sunday, December 10 at 2:00 pm.

Director Kate Fishman will be casting up to 11 males and 11 females, plus 3 children (ages 6-12). The actors will need good vocal skills and be capable of portraying several characters. Auditions will consist of a cold reading from the script and actors will be asked to voice more than one role. They may also be asked to make sound effects.

The play will be performed as a live radio broadcast in front of a studio (theater) audience, and the actors will read from scripts – no line memorization will be required. No prior acting experience is necessary; both accomplished and aspiring actors are encouraged to audition. Participants can expect 2-3 weekday rehearsals during October and November. Gateway Youth Hockey

The Gladiators Midget Blue team split the weekend with a 5-4 loss on Friday night and a 6-4 win on Saturday night. In the first game, the Gladiators traveled to Warwick to face the Wave. The Gladiators jumped on the board first, when Quirino doCanto took a pass from Jared Robbins, skated by a defenseman, and lifted a quick backhand shot over the goalie. A little over two minutes later, the Wave evened the score at one, and the game would remain tied 1-1 for the rest of the period. The Wave then took advantage of some mistakes and scored two quick goals to start the second period. The Gladiators clawed their way back in a few minutes later, with doCanto picking up his second and third goals of the game. His line mate, Zack Lovendale, assisted on both goals, while Tyler Lovendale assisted on one. The tie was short lived as the Wave took the lead back just eight seconds later. Then, with a little over five minutes left in the game, Z. Lovendale found the back of the net, with the assist going to Coleby Paling. Once again, the tie didn't last long, as less than a minute later the Wave took the lead for good. Ethan Allegrini had a great game, allowing only one goal on the 21 that he faced.

In the second game of the weekend, the Gladiators traveled to Orleans to face the Lower Cape Coyotes. They skated away with a 6-4 victory as well as showing great poise while facing a difficult opponent. The Gladiators got the first two goals of the game early, with Robert Maloney stuffing home a rebound for the first goal and Robbins taking a feed from doCanto, shooting it by the goalie, with Matt Maloney grabbing the other assist. The Coyotes pulled it back to within one at the end of the period, making it 2-1 after one period. The Coyotes then tied the game about ten minutes into the period, but the Gladiators took the lead back when T. Lovendale scored on an assist from Noah DeMoranville. The Coyotes tied it back up 30 seconds later, but the Gladiators didn't wait long before taking the lead once again, 10 seconds after that. Ethan Harrop scored the goal, with the assist going to Z. Lovendale. The score remained that way until late in the period when the Coyotes tied it once again. The score didn't stay tied for long, as Harrop scored another go-ahead goal, less than a minute later, assists going to R. Maloney and Z. Lovendale. The Gladiators added an empty net goal by doCanto, with four seconds remaining. Alex DeMarco played well in net, earning the victory, making 25 saves on the day.

Tabor Academy Initiates Exchange with Danish School

Tabor Academy will welcome 27 students from Rysensteen Gymnasium in Copenhagen, Denmark, on Sunday, October 1 for a four-day in-depth visit.

According to Kerry Saltonstall, Director of Communications, Tabor is a new member of Rysensteen's network of international schools participating in their Global Citizenship Program. Tabor is the new math/science hub for Rysensteen, where the Danish students studying these subjects will come for an international perspective.

The Danish students are eager to sample Tabor's extensive advanced curriculum in math, science, and engineering, subjects the students are concentrating in at home. Typically, the Danish students conduct their senior year visit at a public school within their international network of eleven schools across the globe, a feature of Rysensteen's global citizenship program. At Tabor, the students are looking forward to experiencing what an American school is like, but even more what Rick DaSilva, Associate Director of the Center for International Students at Tabor, is the organizer of the exchange and has set up individualized schedules to take best advantage of the visiting students' interests. "I am eager to see how our students and the Rysensteen students will interact socially and through the academic projects we have planned after enjoying some contact over social media during the summer. Our hope is that our students will take equal advantage of our visitors' experience and perspective and make it as worthwhile an experience as possible," said DaSilva.

A feature of Rysenstein Gymnasium is very active student ownership of the culture of their school. As this is also a strength at Tabor, Mr. DaSilva has arranged a cultural conversation on Tuesday evening during the exchange to allow Tabor and Rysenstein students to discuss the opportunities and challenges of true student engagement in helping to set cultural and behavioral norms at school.

In March, 27 Tabor students will have the opportunity to visit Copenhagen to see Rysenstein Gymnasium in action and reconnect with their newfound Danish friends. Future exchanges for Tabor students are envisioned in coming years at the other schools within the Rysenstein Global Citizenship Network in countries such as Argentina, Canada, China, Egypt, Iceland, India, Russia, Singapore, Spain and Turkey. Here's to cross cultural education!

Tabor Academy Hosts Pulitzer Prize Winning Author

On October 10, Pulitzer Prize winning author Richard Ford will spend the day with Tabor Academy students and faculty, sharing his craft as a visiting author. He will present a formal reading of his work for the Tabor Community and the public at 6:30 pm that evening.

The day has been in the works for some time, planned by English faculty member and Wareham resident, Mark Howland. "The opportunity for budding writers to meet someone so accomplished is really formative," said Howland. "It has been a dream of mine to be able to have someone of this caliber come to campus for some time." In order to create the most meaningful interaction, Howland has crafted a day that allows students with the most interest in creative writing some uninterrupted and unscripted time with the author over lunch, while the entire school will have a chance to hear about his life and inspiration at their weekly school meeting.

To prepare for the day, the school required summer readings from Ford's Rock Springs, a collection of his short stories. In order to get a feel for his writing, the younger students in Grades 9 and 10 read the story "Rock Springs" and another story of their choosing, while upperclassmen read "Communist" and a second story of their choosing. Further, Howland is teaching a senior elective called Oates & Ford (Joyce Carol Oates and Richard Ford) that is exploring the writers' short story styles and themes in depth. This class of seniors, as well as other AP and Honors English classes, will have dedicated time with Mr. Ford in the afternoon to hear a reading and to talk in depth about various styles he uses, how he informs his work, and what his greatest influences have been.

Ford has just completed his first work of non-fiction, a memoir called Between Them, which is about his parents and the life they led before his arrival as their only child. His titles, available to students at Tabor's Charles Hayden Library, include Let Me Be Frank With You, The Sportswriter, A Multitude of Sins, Canada, The Lay of the Land, Independence Day, and A Piece of My Heart.

The formal reading by Richard Ford will take place at 6:30 pm in Tabor's Lyndon South Auditorium, Stroud Academic Center, 232 Front Street, Marion. The event is free and open to the public, though the school requires a simple pre-registration in order to plan appropriate seating: taboracademy.org/richardford.

Sara Elizabeth Achorn Crowned Miss New Bedford

Eight contenders took to the stage on Saturday at the 65th annual Miss New Bedford pageant, but only one walked away with the crown and a $6,500 college scholarship!

Sara Elizabeth Achorn of Rochester, an 18-year-old freshman attending Lesley University, impressed the judges with her confidence, public speaking abilities, stage presence, and passion for the city, earning her the highest number of points and the coveted Miss New Bedford title.

In addition to winning a $6,500 scholarship, Sara also received the Talent Award, a $100 scholarship, for earning the highest points in talent for her vocal performance of "And I Am Telling You" from the Broadway Musical Dream Girls. She also received the Miracle Maker Award, a $100 scholarship, for raising the most monies for Children's Miracle Network Hospitals.

When asked how she felt just moments before they announced the winner, Sara says she didn't know what to think. Her name not yet being called, with only one spot left, she grew emotional. "I instantly felt myself start to cry. Then when they actually called my name, I still didn't believe it. It was crazy!" Sara says. "It sounds cliché, but I truly believe any one of the women could have walked home with the crown that night. I'm so blessed to have received this title, and I'm so excited to be the best Miss New Bedford I can be. I'm hoping to get at least one hundred appearances this year!"

Throughout her year-long reign, Sara will serve the City of New Bedford and its surrounding communities as a role model and an active volunteer. She will dedicate her year of service to her personally selected platform, "Imperfection: Pushing the Importance of Body Positivity in Today's Youth." As Miss New Bedford, Sara has also earned the opportunity to compete for the title of Miss Massachusetts in 2018. Should she win the state title, she will go on to compete for the title of Miss America.

The Miss New Bedford pageant is a local preliminary of the Miss America Organization. All phases of competition mirror the national pageant. Contestants competed in Interview (private panel of judges), On-Stage Question, Lifestyle & Physical Fitness in Swimsuit, Talent, and Evening Wear.

The eight young women to compete included Sara Elizabeth Achorn, Kenzi Farland, Morgan Garcia, Alyssa Maitoza, Kenzie Hazel Moniz, Beatriz Ribeiro, Kimberly Lim Souza, and Megan Sylvia, all from Greater New Bedford, between the ages of 17-24 years old.

Animal Advice

Jay Gould, DVM

My dog is a 10 year old mutt. He has been drinking a lot more water in the past 6 months. At first I thought it was because the house was dry through the winter but now I'm not so sure. What's the problem?

A change in the water consumption habits of either a dog or a cat can be an important sign of illness. There are about 15 different disorders such as diabetes, kidney disease and hormonal problems that may present themselves initially as increased thirst or excessive urination. It is very important to discuss you pets water consumption with your veterinarian as a delay in diagnosis may result in severe illness.

A POWERFUL PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, who light all roads so I can attain my goals, you who give me the divine gifts to forgive and forget all evil against me, in this short prayer, to thank you for all things and confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you, even in spite of all material illusions. I wish to be with you in eternal glory, thank you for your mercy towards me and mine. The person must say this prayer for three consecutive days. After three days, the favor requested will be granted, even if it may appear difficult. This prayer must be published immediately after the favor is granted without mentioning the favor.
